Murry's Saloon.

THE Subscriber, having taken charge of MURRAY'S POPULAR SALOON, would say to his numerous patrons that he has added a new

Ladies' Department, which is on the first floor (entrance same as before), north door on Franklin Street, and the moderate charges to the best Ladies' Saloon this side of Boston, where, with the assistance of female attendants he will promptly attend to their calls for refreshments, such as Oysters, Ice Cream, and Fancy Cakes of all kinds, Fruit and Confectionery.

He still retains the services of Mr. G. D. ROBINSON, who is one of the best Fancy Cooks in the State, who will attend to their orders for Wedding, and Fancy Cakes, Charlotte Russes, Frozen Puddings, Frozen Slippery Elm, Roman Punch, &c.

Meats and Game of all kinds, cooked and served in a proper style.

He has gone to Boston purposely to visit, and has made arrangements to be supplied with the best which will be served up in his superior style, as all who have favored him with custom can testify.

New York and Virginia Oysters,

Orders solicited from the surrounding towns for Wedding and Fancy Cakes, which will be carefully packed and found according to directions.

Orders delivered in any part of the city.

In conclusion, I would say, I am to have the assistance of my father (in case of need,) at dinner or supper parties. All of which is respectfully submitted by

C. YIELDS MURRY.

Money Cannot Buy It

For Sight is Priceless!

THE DIAMOND GLASSES

Manufactured by E. SPENCER & CO., New York, which are now offered to the public, are pronounced by all the celebrated Opticians of the World to be the MOST PERFECT, Naturally Artificial help to the human eye ever produced.

They are ground to their true adaptation, in a minute Crystal Pebble, melted to their perfect, oval, and divine brilliancy.

The Scientific Principle on which they are constructed brings the focus or centre of the lens directly in front of the eye, thus preserving the full sight and vision, in the natural sphere by which alone it can be preserved, preventing all unpleasant sensations, and straightening and wavering of light, thereby rendering them peculiar to all others in use.

They are mounted in the finest manner, in frames of the best quality, with practical bridge for that purpose. Their finish and durability cannot be surpassed.

CAUTION.—None genuine unless bearing their trade mark, stamped on every frame.

E. SPENCER & LOWELL,

Jewelers and Opticians, are Sole Agents for Bangor, Maine, from whom they can only be obtained. These goods are not supplied to Peddlers at any price.

ANOTHER LEAF OF NEW YORK LIFE.

HOW THE POOR LIVE.

NEW YORK, June, 27.

I promised, to give you some little account of how the poor live in New York. Scarcely an idea can be conveyed in a short letter, but there is no much to be said of a great city like this that one, scarcely tires of writing if his readers get weary of reading. All I can say for consolation to them on that score is that after they are disgusted with reading everything they can find of New York, then they can come here and find more than enough of entertainment in studying the sights of the city and surroundings, and the habits of the people.

I suppose there are more people in New York living upon meagre salaries and consequently living in almost abject poverty than in any other like amount of population in the country. This is not all necessary, however. In fact there are thousands in this city who live themselves in the worst garrets, eat the meanest fare, and even live without a bed or fresh food for the sake of hoarding up a few pennies each day, and in this respect it is also ahead of any other place in the country.

Now follow this noble woman of the laboring, in the street and see where she or he goes. The woman may have a home, but it is without the first requisite of a home in Maine. Follow her through the crazy by-ways of the parts of the town a few steps directly east or north of the city hall, where so many millions are annually stolen by the gambling politicians from just such as she. Follow her through a filthy alley to a shaky old house in the rear of some manufacturing establishment, into a damp, close basement, or up under the heated eaves.

There is no furniture in the room except a rude bench and a few old blankets. On the shelves may be some broken crockery which is scarcely necessary, for many of these people eat their food as dogs and cats do. I have seen them sitting about, the stoops eating raw, tough meat and a mouldy loaf, and sometimes only one of these afflicted dinner and desert. It would puzzle you to guess how people can sleep in such places as these. The smell of them would make the least sensitive shudder, and then the hard boards, barely covered by a blanket, are in continual though silent dispute by several species, not of the genus known as man. And to enjoy these promises there may be half a dozen in one room, although I believe they do not count children as anybody in making up their household in these tenements.

But with all this filth and stifling and meanness that follows the woman, the men go several points below. Many a night have I seen the broad stoops of the cross streets within sight of Broadway crowded with sleeping men. Hundreds of them do not undress for weeks together. When it rains of course they scatter to some indoor sleeping place; but even when it rains late in the night, men sometimes may be seen huddling under the lee side of some old building to avoid the heaviest of the rain. And this to save the price of a lodging, which they can procure for ten cents. But these ten cent lodgings are no better than the soft side of the curb stone, while the air in them is undurable save to the lungs of a beast. Yes, there are lodging houses in this city where men live nights for ten cents, and even by "bartering" they are procured for less. The bed is the bare floor, with possibly some substance, but little softer for a pillow. The occupants are strewn about as thickly as possible, scarcely being allowed rolling room. You may imagine what the atmosphere of such a place can be, when you consider that these rooms are low posted, not ventilated and in the dirtiest part of the town.

The tenement houses are the most interesting of the abodes of the poor. These institutions it has taken Yankee genius and calculation to bring to perfection. And by perfection I mean the art of storing the utmost number of human beings into the least possible space. The casual reader may imagine, from hearsay, that the most thickly populated part of New York is in the neighborhood of the Five Points, or Water Street. Those places are certainly pretty thoroughly populated, and on Sunday, when most of the denizens are "loafing" it is almost impossible to pass through some of the narrow streets. But the buildings are few and small, and their occupants are necessarily limited. In the up-town section, bounded by Grand street on the North, the Bowery on the West, the East river on the East, and extending up as far as 20th street, may be found the "model" tenement houses, which partake somewhat of the nature of slaughter pens. Great blocks are reared to the height of six stories, cut up into small rooms, with narrow stairways and doors, and in these places families are stowed so thickly that there scarcely appears standing room for all. To give you an idea of the density of the population in these streets, let me give you one or two examples by blocks. I believe the densest population is found in the block bounded by Fourth and Fifth streets, First Avenue and Avenue A., and in the block bounded by East Houston, Stanton, Chrystie and Forsyth streets. In the first block there are 84 houses, with a population of 8,040; in the second there are 27 houses with a population of 1700. To give a still better idea of the space occupied by these people, both these blocks could be enclosed in the boundary of Main and Columbia, Hammond and Union streets in Bangor. Imagine nearly five thousand persons living on those two or three squares in our city! Yet, only three times that area here contains a population equal to the whole of Bangor. As there are churches and stores in these blocks also, you will readily perceive how packed above the remaining ground that would barely give space to bury them. Yet until you know the rents of these pens you do not understand why people live so meanly here. The average rent of single rooms, close, inconvenient, and unhealthy as they are, is $100 per year, which would pay the rent of a moderate cottage in Bangor.

There is a species of aristocracy, among those poor people. You will see single men for instance, who will sleep on a board, but who will aspire to something a step above in the matter of food. That is, they will eat their food, however poor in a style like other people. There are eating houses for the beggar as well as for the Nabob. He cannot pay his five or ten dollars for a dinner at Delmonico's but he apes the mannerisms of eating at a saloon—boarding on the European plan"—by going into a basement and eating a ten cent dinner, with his three cent mug of beer and his penny cigar. The food is execrable of course, the fumes alone would turn an ordinary stomach, and the cooking is slop. But it is "living" still, to eat at those places and sleep on the street or bare floors.

It will no longer be a surprise to learn that hundreds of men, women and children make early trips about the city picking dry bones, moldy bread and decayed fruit from the ash barrels for their daily subsistence; that many thousands actually live upon the debris of club-house carousals, and that literally the crumbs in the better quarters that are not good enough for aristocratic cats and dogs are served up to satisfy the palates of people who are either too poor to get better, or too parsimonious to spare the pennies which they drop into their strong boxes for the sake of putting flesh upon their bones. But it must be borne in mind, as before intimated, that the apparent poverty is not all from necessity; sometimes the beggar is laying up his thousands and these charitable frauds, no less than the jail-birds, resort to New York because in smaller places their meanness would expose them and block their little games.

Nor will it surprise any one knowing these facts that in the midst of so much misery, crime and degradation are the natural products, and that in these hot days, when the tenement houses and basements are unendurable, and population is emptied into the to spend the nights, the arrests for [illegible] deeds are now more numerous than ore in New York with one exception, that week of the memorable July [illegible] incidents have recently come under view, further illustrating the resorts to people under this teaching will, by no [illegible] last week a woman was arrested and prison for imposition and cruelty, it [illegible] been positively proved that while beg[illegible] she was constantly in the practice of [illegible] young child in the street to create [illegible] by and sticking pins into it to make it [illegible] The other case was not so inhuman, [illegible] took more of the intelligent Wall street [illegible] On the afternoon when the news [illegible] death of Dickens was published the [illegible] realized a harvest. But many papers [illegible] over, and late in the evening the [illegible] went far up town to sell them. [illegible] genius must start some extra[illegible] news. One of them passed under my window crying "Here's yer latest News'n, fourth Telegram! Full account the assassination uv Charles Dickon!" He sold his papers rapidly, and it was amusing to see the people open them, look eagerly for the startling news, quietly fold the papers again and watch the next man who was to be sold. The Yankee, you know, never acknowledges himself beaten, and he takes his revenge by witnessing the same discomfiture in others.

THE RED RIVER TROUBLE.

It seems quite probable that Riel and his compatriots will offer a stubborn resistance to the Red River expedition. The Montreal Gazette believes there will be no trouble, holding that Riel is only anxious, for his own safety, but this personal fear, induced by a refusal to grant assurance of a general amnesty, will naturally impel him to resistance, as he must either receive the invaders peaceably and take the chances of treachery, or meet them in arms prepared to fight them, off.

The Detroit Post of the 23d inst. thus refers to the responsibility for the bloodshed that may occur:

That expedition is just strong enough, and is badly managed enough to insure, if resisted, a disaster that will terribly excite all the Dominion, and shock all England. Drawing a thousand or more young men, one or two from each neighborhood in the Dominion, and exposing them to the risk of a bloody massacre if attacked; by plunging them into a wilderness, with such mismanagement that an Indian assault must, almost, inevitably destroy them, may be a shrewd way to stir up a terrible indignation in every part of the Dominion and in England; but this indication may, after all, lack a direction not foreseen by the projectors of the enterprise. Suppose a bloody disaster does occur: it may be that the people of the Dominion and of England may have sense enough to direct their anger against the projectors of the foolish enterprise for their bad management, and for their horrible policy in deliberately arranging for such a fearful sacrifice to aid their political schemes. For, if a disaster does occur, the really guilty parties will be the men who needlessly started the expedition, and whose bad management will have caused its destruction. If there is any war in the Northwest the Dominion politicians will be guilty of causing it, needlessly and foolishly. The blood of the slain will be upon their garments, and the popular vengeance may be directed against them; rather than against those who resist unwanton and unprovoked invasion, whose purpose is certainly liable to grave suspicion.

The majority of the committee appointed to investigate the charges against Gen. Babcock, with reference to the San Domingo Treaty, report as follows:

We look in vain for any evidence by which of a moment's consideration of any indelicacy on his part or any misstatement or prevarication. His whole conduct has been marked with truth, honor, and fidelity, and the whole evidence leaves him without a stain; and we would be untrue to our own convictions if we did not apply to General Ingalls and Sackett, who accompanied him and aided in the negotiations, the like commendation. Mr. Sumner made a severe attack on General Babcock in his place in the Senate, and he owes it to himself, and the country to make an apology as soon as possible."

FROM CUBA. Havana specials attribute the capture of the George B. Upton's second expedition to the blundering of the Cuban Junta in New York. The mass of the correspondence fell into the hands of the Spaniards, giving them important information of the designs of the Cubans in the United States. Since President Grant's message the Spanish papers in Havana have indulged in an extremely threatening tone towards this country. The Diario is urging Spain to require of the United States the dissolution of the Cuban Juntas in New York, New Orleans and other American cities, and the seizure and delivery to Spain of the steamer George B. Upton. The Cubans are said to be laying waste with fire all estates in the interior which can give shelter to Spanish troops. Within two weeks 34 estates have been destroyed by the insurgents.

COLLEGE DONATIONS. At the Commencement of Princeton College the class of 1820 held its centennial meeting and presented to the College a fund of $10,000, the interest of which is to be applied to the support of a fellowship on the plan of the English Universities. President McCosh, in a speech of acceptance, stated that the gifts to the College during the last year amounted to over $175,000, of which $50,000 was from John S. Green of Elizabeth City, and $30,000 cash from Robert Bonner and E. G. Maynard.

A NEW ALLIANCE. A resolution has been passed by a large majority in the Senate of the South American Republic of Columbia, instructing the government to propose an alliance with the Republic of Spanish America, the object being the liberation of Cuba and Porto Rico. Should Spain refuse to withdraw her troops from that Island the states are to declare war against her and aid the Cubans in achieving their independence.

A GREAT FIRE AT PITTSBURGH, PA. A telegram from Pittsburg gives the following account of the most disastrous oil fire which ever occurred in that city. At 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, during a terrible rain-storm, in which houses were blown down, and trees uprooted, a twenty thousand-barrel tank belonging to the Eclipse oil refinery, was struck by lightning and another tank belonging to the Citizens' refinery, was struck at the same time. The Eclipse tank instantly exploded, the burning oil running toward the river, burning all the buildings in its way, including Dr. Twoddle's house and setting fire to Shadbury bridge, which was totally destroyed.—The following are the estimated losses: Citizens' refinery, $20,000, fully insured; Eclipse building, $75,000; oil, $8000; machinery, &c., $60,000—insured in Eastern Companies; Swearingen & McCandler's agency for Forsyth Bros., $15,000—no insurance; Astral Works, $40,000—but little insurance; Anchor Works, $12,000; National Works, $15,000—partially insured. The total loss is probably $500,000; Henry B. Foster, brother of the late Stephen C. Foster, was burned to death. The fire still continued on Wednesday. A warehouse, containing 3000 empty barrels and a tank of benzine, belonging to the Citizens' refinery, were destroyed during Tuesday night, causing an additional loss of $6000.

The President on Wednesday approved of bills to reorganize the Marine hospital service and provide for the relief of sick and disabled seamen; to incorporate the National Bolivian Navigation Co.; to amend the act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to license yachts; for the relief of Commodores J. B. Russel and John C. Carter; and to provide for changing the boundaries of land districts.

The case of the Erie Railroad against the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern road in the Supreme Court of N. Y. on a motion for an injunction, was postponed yesterday, the defendants not being ready to argue the case. The plaintiff then asked for a temporary injunction, which Judge Barnard declined to decide on to-day.

THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

GEN. CHAMBERLAIN NOMINATED.

The gathering into Portland and pending the following proceedings are fully proceedings at the gathering in Lyceum and the Democrats on Tuesday:—

The Convention was called to order at about 12 o'clock, by Gen. James H. Butler, of Brook, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, who said that in accordance with the usage of the party in this State, the Chairman of each of the Democratic delegations for each county named the presidents for the several counties.

At this point, Gen. Geo. F. Emery, of Portland, who had been selected by the State Committee as temporary president, took the chair, and on taking it spoke as follows:

Gentlemen of the Convention: I am duly admitted by the Committee and rounded call with the request that I should preside over the deliberations of this Convention. I am not unmindful of the honor conferred upon me by the call, but I am not unmindful of the responsibilities which attach to the position. I am not unmindful of the fact that the Democratic party of this State has been in the minority for many years, and that the Democratic party of this State has been in the minority for many years, and that the Democratic party of this State has been in the minority for many years, and

SAFE ARRIVAL HOME OF THE PORTLAND COMMANDERIES.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE WING.]

PORTLAND, Me., June 29, 1870.

The special train with the two Commanderies, arrived at Portland at 10 o'clock this evening. They were met at the depot by the Sir Knights who were so unfortunate as to be left at home, and the Portland Mechanic Blues, and escorted to their hall. The hearty and undisguised expression of admiration of Bangor, her gallant Knights and beautiful women, is universal. The question is repeatedly asked, "What can we do to repay such unbounded and unremitted attention?" The unexpected courtesies extended by the citizens, and excellent cuisine at the hotels, left nothing to be desired, and rendered the occasion one of undivided and uninterrupted enjoyment. That Bangor may prosper, is the sincere wish of every true Knight who has just partaken of her hospitality. J. S. B.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS—SECOND SESSION.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 29.

A bill was passed authorizing the printing of twenty thousand copies of the 15th amendment.

Mr. Cameron's motion to recommit the Texas Pacific Railroad bill was lost—35 to 31.

Mr. Drake moved a substitute for the bill authorizing the Kansas Pacific Railroad to extend its road and telegraph line to El Paso, New Mexico, which was laid over until the next morning hour to be printed. The tariff bill was then taken up and the remaining provisions relating to insurance Companies was inserted on the recommendation of the Finance Committee:

And that no United States and Insurance Companies shall not be deemed due until such dividends are payable, either in money or otherwise, and the money received by Mutual Insurance Companies on their policy-holders annual or semi-annual interest allowed or paid to depositors in Savings banks or saving institutions, shall not be considered as dividends.

The paragraph making the duty on bituminous coal and shale at 50 cents per ton of 28 bushels of 80 pounds to the bushel, was rejected.

The recommendations of the Committee specifying the following duties were agreed to: On rough or unfinished grindstones $1.50; on finished grindstones, $2.00 per ton; on freestone and stone grarite and all building or monumental stone, except marble, $1.00 per ton.

An amendment to strike from the free list, books, maps and charts specially imported in single copies and not for sale, of which no edition is printed in the United States, was opposed by Mr. Sumner who regarded a duty on books as a tax upon knowledge. He was in favor of free trade in books. After discussion the amendment was agreed to 27 to 22. The Senate then went into Executive session and subsequently took a recess.

The evening session was occupied in discussion of the motion to strike out the duty on Bessemer steel rails, but without a vote the Senate adjourned.

WORCESTER, Mass., June 29.

The examination of witnesses before the coroners jury, Dr. J. M. Rice, which has lasted five days, was ended to-day and the jury retired. It is to the effect that the Plymouth Station cause of the late railroad disaster, being from the fracture by an overloaded car of Dimmers piston, Dunlap on its way from their manufactory to Hoosac Tunnel, for blasting purposes, in a car on the Boston & Albany railroad, together with a box of explosives from the Orient Powder Co., which was not properly marked. The verdict censures the Boston & Albany Railroad Co., for not taking the necessary precaution in its transportation, and also the Orient Powder Co., for carelessness in not properly marking their boxes of waxes for shipment.

NEW YORK ITEMS.

NEW YORK, June 29.

MARINE ENTRY.

The perplexities that sometimes assail and surround the tyro in Custom House business frequently assume rather a humorous aspect to a mere observer. The details in the passing of entries are really intricate, and should not be attempted rashly, or at least not without the assistance of some one of the gentlemanly brokers who are always on hand to give information and assist the ignorant—for a consideration.

We recall one of these instances. A countryman, whose newly married daughter was traveling abroad, received a filial remembrance in the shape of some cloth for a new suit for himself, and some silk for his wife, and a few trifles for some other members of the family. The values of these purchases were expressed in an invoice which he held in his hand as he entered the Rotunda of the Wall street establishment. When his curiosity had been somewhat satisfied by several glances at the dome, clock, clerks, &c., he addressed himself to the first person whom he encountered.

"Say! Stranger, my darter has sent me suthin from Europe an' I want to get it."

"You had better speak to the 'Deputy Collector,'" was the advice given.

"Where is the Deputy?"

He was directed to one of the Collector's Aids.

"Be you the Deputy?" he enquired of one of the heads of Departments.

"Yes, Sir! what can I do for you?"

"Why you see," he explained, "I live down to New Jarsey, an my darter she got married an'"

"Can I assist you, sir, in any way?" the official interrupted.

"Wall, I reckon—you see I live down to Jarsey, an my darter, she—"

"Yes, you've told that before."

"An' she and her man they went over to Europ, an' she sent some things hime—an' I've come to fetch 'em—ken you let me have 'em. I telled my wife I'd be back by the five train an'—"

"Is that an invoice you have there?"

"No, Sir! that's a list of the things I live in Jarsey, an' my darter—"

"Excuse my interrupting you, but you must first make an entry."

"An entry, where about's?"

"A paper sir," stating the quantity and value of the goods as expressed in this invoice. But if you are unaccustomed to this kind of business you had better consult a broker, sir."

"A broker! do you have them fellers here?"

"Certainly—there is one," pointing one out—"that is Mr. Godwin, he will transact the business for you."

"Oh, he will—what's the tax Mr. Deputy?"

"You must make your own terms with him, good morning, sir," and the gentleman turned to other pressing duties.

The stranger was soon in consultation with the broker. The entry was made out, and presented to the proper clerk by whom the duties were made up and permit given. From there to the Naval office, and so on until it was time to stop to the Cashier's office and settle.

"Have you any gold?" Godwin asked.

"Wall, none to speak of, I'm going live down to Jarsey an' my darter she has married—"

"Yes," interrupted Sam, "that's all very well, and must be very comforting to you, but they receive only gold for duties, and you must buy it outside."

"How much?" trembling question.

Godwin told him.

"Oh, skow, skow, it 'ot so much!"

"Yes, it is unreasonable, but here is the duplicate. Take the shine—and this the rate—so much per pound—and so much advance—"

"All aforesaid, I don't want to add that or anything else, and didn't mean no way of that; I won't ide nothin; you see I live down to Jarsey—"

"Very well! you told me that—I reform measure according to value—the price of the goods that you claim. Come now let's go and purchase the gold." So Sam started for Cheapside followed by his client.

In a few minutes they returned, and reporting to the Cashier, Sam put down the amount before the gold Hoffman, who checked entry and permit, and gave all the latter to the anxious consignee.

There," old Godwin, "you will take this permit over to the Appraisers office and you will get your goods."

"Why I shan't be there."

"No! they are at the place where small packages are generally received." Sam gave him the proper directions and the country man started for his treasures.—"Let me see what this was, Sample Office." "Sample Office." Sample Room."

"Hollo," he exclaimed, "this is the place," and entered. There a keeper of the establishment approached him, and the usual colloquy ensued.—

"Well, stranger, I live down to Jarsey, an' my darter—at this moment he espied in the low of goods that contained the things the expressman in the wall Sq. that's my butter in, I guess by—"

"Some things have arrived for you, Sir, and that case over there is ample."

"Get-ually the?"

"Well, stranger, as you appear to be a gentleman, I'll open it for you." "I live down to Jarsey, an' my darter she—"

The keeper of the establishment was down on the garnishee that formed the topping of the package. The wood split and rattled—he saw that called him that was Rogers, and he began keeper refused to have him anymore. As he descended he was heard to make the now familiar remark, you'd need refer to me, and when you want to attend—"

"You see I live down to Jarsey on my farm, I keep 3 starres—"

Sir, he quickly, or quick had said—the keeper, the goods were unpacked and put up—"I live now I see I live down to Jarsey—"
